

Third Party Risk Management

Managing risk across your extended enterprise with Archer

Your vendors, suppliers and third-party ecosystem are critical to your success.

Your organization is increasingly leveraging third parties to help deliver your products and services. These relationships range from providing a critical component to your product to other inputs from across your supply chain. The potential for adverse events and poor performance by one of these contributors to your organization increases. The result is the acceleration of risks and most organizations do not have adequate staff to manage them.

With Archer, you can transform third-party risk management into a strategic advantage for your organization.

Proactive decision-making: Risk management can be prioritized to focus on the third parties that matter the most or represent the highest risk.

Reduced costs: Creating a repeatable, manageable process reduces the amount of effort required.

Agility within the organization: Optimizing external vendor relationships allows the organization to take advantage of opportunities.

Improved performance: Third parties are essential to your organizational performance and governing their risk to your organization allows you to drive success.

Archer's approach to third party risk management reduces while enhancing assurance and resilience across your extended enterprise.
